insider says, adding that RiRi actually sees Kanye's notoriety as a liability. "She worried that everyone thinks he's a joke and he'd ruin her brand." Case in point: Last year, vendors slashed the cost of Kanye's Yeezus tour tickets in half, from $69 to $35, in an attempt to fill seats, and a petition to ban the rapper from the 2015 Glastonbury Festival garnered more than 130,000 signatures.

Despite it all, an oblivious Kanye, 37, continues to crow about his creative genius — this is the man who's compared himself to Steve Jobs, Walt Disney and, oh, yeah, God — setting up a clash of egos that was doomed to fail. "The tour would have ended up a bust," the source says.

BUTTING IN

There's also that not-so-small matter of Kanye's wife, Kim Kardashian, whose lightning rod presence threatened to overshadow Rihanna's own. "Rihanna has witnessed how the Kardashians infect a setting," says the insider. "She didn't want Kim to interfere with her work or her image." Her concern should come as no surprise. Earlier this year, Kanye admitted that friends turned their backs on him for marrying into the publicity-hungry family. "Rihanna will be damned if the Kardashians rain on her parade," the insider says. Sounds like Kanye had better grab an umbrella. OK!

TOM CONE YEAR WITHOUT SUR!

espite a hectic work schedule, one would think that a man of as many means as Tom Cruise would be able to jet across the world on a whim, especially to spend time with his young daughter. However, new reports reveal that even though the megastar recently had a break between projects, he didn't take the time to visit Suri – making it more than a year since he's held his 8-year-old in his arms. "He had two weeks off after wrapping Mission: Impossible 5 in London and could have easily seen Suri," says a source. "He absolutely adores her, so no one can understand why he didn't leap at the chance to visit her, especially since he was in the U.S."

Given that Tom has previously insisted that he and Suri are "extremely close," sources close to the actor speculate that the Church of Scientology may have driven a wedge between them. When Katie Holmes left Tom in 2012, the church may have labeled her a "suppressive person," and because she has primary custody of their daughter, Suri could be considered off-limits as well. While the church has denied any assertions that Tom has been forced to "disconnect" from his daughter, many are struggling to understand why he's MIA. "Tom loves his children and he's a good dad, so everyone is perplexed by the Suri situation," shares the source. "A year is a long time not to physically see a child. If it's true, he's got some serious explaining to do."

Tom and Connor watched the NCAA Women's Basketball Tournament in Tampa on April 5.

TORI & CANDY KISS AND MAKE UP

Could one of Hollywood's most epic family feuds be over? Insiders tell OK! that following a heart-to-heart in February, Tori Spelling and her mom, Candy, may have finally buried the hatchet for good. "They both apologized for what was said and done and resolved to put the past behind them," reveals a source. "They've been inseparable ever since."

Indeed, the long estranged mother-daughter duo have been putting on a united front over the past month, with Candy treating the entire family to sushi dinners and Sunday brunches. On March 15, Tori even invited her mom to son Liam's eighth-birthday party. "With the reality TV crews finally gone, Tori no longer has to play the victim," adds the source, "and that's helped repair their relationship."

even bigger!"

obbi Kristina Brown has been languishing in a coma since Jan. 31, but as her loved ones start to make peace with her state — and the prospect of her not waking up — one family member is still holding out for a miracle. Sources say Bobbi's dad, Bobby Brown, has ignored doctors' prognoses — that Bobbi's brain damage is so severe, even a sudden rebound would likely leave her unable to eat, speak or possibly even breathe on her own — and has resolved to keep her on life support indefinitely. "The decision is Bobby's and Bobby's alone, and right now, he's not entertaining any talk of pulling the plug," says a family friend, who adds that his daughter's care costs Bobby an estimated $7,500 a day. "He doesn't care about the money. He feels like he just could not live with himself if he gave up on his daughter." While Bobby's friends are urging him to focus on his youngest son, Cassius, 5, plus the baby he has on the way with wife Alicia, he remains consumed with Bobbi Kristina. Says the friend, "Bobby carries some guilt that he wasn't more present in her life and that he didn't do more to stop the downward spiral that led to this tragedy."

Lee Miller has dropped 40 pounds, reportedly due to secret lap band surgery.

"That's the buzz among her friends, but Abby is being very hush-hush about it," says an insider. Sources say the outspoken dance teacher has been pining for love and a long-term relationship, and is hoping a new body will help.

"She gets lonely," says a friend, who adds that after Abby's mom died last year, "Abby decided that she needed to get her life in order. That's why she was so determined to lose weight."

"She's had a few romances over the years," says a source, "but they always fizzle out."

oth the lady protest too much? After OK! reported two weeks ago that her marriage was in trouble, Kaley Cuoco took to social media to blast the story, posting a series of cutesy snaps with hubby Ryan Sweeting. But, in her denial, she curiously admitted she hadn't seen her beloved in a month!

On April 2, the Big Bang Theory star Instagrammed four pics showing her cuddling up to Ryan, who's been on the road trying to revive his pro tennis career. Kaley captioned the set: "We are totally getting divorced, can't you tell? 4 weeks apart and finally reunited — I missed this guy more than anything!! #rumors #not pregnant #totally married."

Case closed? Not so fast, according to our source, who says the post was just a desperate attempt by Kalev to save face and insider says divert attention from Kaley's afraid of hearing "I told you the tension in their so" from family and relationship. "Kaley's friends who warned paranoid about the her that she was public learning the true rushing into state of her marriage," the source says, adding that with a salary of $1 million per episode, the actress certainly has the means to meet her husband anywhere, anytime. "If things are so great, why didn't she visit him while they were apart?"

Ryan, 27, has been struggling to make a comeback after back surgery sidelined his career in 2013. Determined to prove how happy they are, his 29-year-old wife gushed about his efforts in another Instagram post on April 5: "I have never been more proud of anyone on this planet-this guy is fighting back from a whirlwind of injuries." In fact, our source says,

Ryan's intense focus on work may be the couple's biggest problem. "Ryan wants his career back," the source claims. "That's his number-one priority right now, not Kaley."

Long-distance relationships are hard especially when your job takes you all over the world! To make it work, Jennifer Aniston and Justin Theroux have implemented a new rule over the next few months, as Justin shoots

Zoolander 2 in Rome and The Leftovers in Austin, Texas, and Jen is tied to L.A. with Mean Moms about to go into production. "They made a pact to see each other every three weeks and are committed to a no-excuses policy," an insider tells OK!. On April 4, fans spotted the plan in action, as

Jen, 46, met Justin, 43, at LAX when he arrived from Italy. "Both Jen and Justin know this schedule isn't going to be easy, but they want to do everything they possibly can to see each other," the insider says. "After this separation, they're hoping to finally marry later this year."

His years with One Direction were a rock 'n' roll whirlwind for Zayn Malik – and now he's worried some of his indiscretions may have been caught on video. "Zayn's heard there's a tape going around of him naked and partying," a friend tells OK!. "He's not sure if it's legit but thinks there is a good chance it could be. He's going out of his mind." If a sex tape leaks, the former boy bander, 22, could be in deep trouble with his traditional family – and fiancée Perrie Edwards. 21. "Zayn is panicking because he and Perrie are already hanging by a thread," the friend says. "A racy video would be the end for them.'

s the Shelton clan expanding soon? After weathering a rough patch in their marriage, sources say, Miranda Lambert and Blake Shelton are ready to be parents. "They finally feel strong as a couple and have decided that growing their family is the next step," an insider tells OK!. "They have bets on whether they'll have a boy or girl first!" The insider says 38-year-old Blake has been partying less and making Miranda, 31, a priority. "They've had a rocky first few years, but things have settled." And the country stars have been inseparable lately - Blake even surprised the audience by singing with Miranda at her concert in Dallas on March 12. "Right now, I'm single," the Real 35-year-old financier. Apparently,

according to Bethenny, 44, "right

Paris IN LOVE!

Paris Jackson's over the moon about her new boyfriend, and she doesn't care who knows it. Michael Jackson's middle child recently confirmed she's dating 18-year-old Chester Castellaw, a soccer player said to be from a wealthy Beverly Hills family, by sharing some intimate snaps on social media. "She has never been happier," a close friend tells OK!. "She's smitten with Chester. It's adorable."

The new relationship is a good sign that Paris, 17, is on the right track after having an extremely tough year in 2013, during which she tried to take her own life. "She's in the best place of her life right now," the friend explains, adding, "The whole family is happy for her. Chester passed all their tests, and they totally approve!"

Though Angelina Jolieunderwent surgery to have her ovaries and fallopian tubes removed to reduce her risk of cancer and announced that she will "not be able to have any more children," there is one thing the mother of six didn't make public — she had her eggs frozen. Experts say that because Angie, 39, still has her uterus, she is actually able to carry a child. "They want another child," an insider says of Angie and hubby Brad Pitt, 51. "Parenthood is the biggest role of their lives, and they weren't ready to give up on having another biological baby. They want to make the most of life after everything she's been through."

After publicly toying with their marital status, sources says Mila Kunis and Ashton Kutcher are heading down the aisle—and planning for more babies!

n March 23, The Late Late Show host James Corden asked Mila Kunis whether she and longtime love Ashton Kutcher first-time parents of 6-month-old daughter

Wyatt - were secretly married. An unusually bashful Mila blurted, "Maybe!" through a huge grin before reluctantly flashing a wedding band.

So are they or aren't they? Turns out, it's complicated. Sources tell OK! that Mila's cov response — the same one she gave Ellen DeGeneres in February – was just a deflection: While the world chooses to believe she and Ashton eloped, they'll be busy officially planning their wedding!

"They're having fun convincing everyone they're already married, because it takes the pressure off the planning that's already underway," says an insider. The source adds that as Mila, 31, and Ashton, 37, nail down the details for an intimate summertime ceremony in Big Sur, Calif., they're simultaneously trying for baby number two. "At first they figured they'd get married and then think about having another kid,"

says the insider,

"Ashton would love four kids!" says a source. "And he's a twin, so he's always talking about 'double trouble."

"but then Ashton asked Mila, What exactly are we waiting for?' They're happier than ever, and Mila isn't opposed to being a pregnant bride."

ON THE DOWN-LOW

Mila and Ashton have gone to great lengths to keep their plans under wraps — a typical tack for the fiercely private couple. When they were first romantically linked in the spring of 2012 - they'd become suddenly inseparable six years after the end of their costarring run on That '70s Show - Mila deemed rumors of their relationship "absurd," adding, "A friend is a friend."

When they got engaged in February of last vear, there was no announcement and no confirmation; just one sparkly ring and two pairs of tight lips. And when Mila became pregnant with Wyatt, she was nearly in her third trimester before coming clean on The Ellen DeGeneres Show, admitting that she'd gone out of her way to keep it secret "for a very long time." The due date? She wouldn't say, of course. And she's not the type to publicize her wedding plans either. Just last year, Mila said, "My theory on weddings is: Don't invite anyone. Do it privately and secretly."

Having a baby changed Mila's views on having a wedding. She wants great memories"

But since becoming a mom, sources say Mila's rethinking just how lowprofile she wants this milestone to be. "Having a baby changed Mila's views on wanting a ceremony with close family and friends that would give her and Ashton beautiful memories," says an insider. "She wants everyone to look back fondly on their special day."

Mila and Ashton's official union will involve some traditional trappings, including dinner and dancing under the stars. But, says a source, "They don't want more than about 40 guests. Mila's letting Ashton's mom, Diane, and her own mother, Elvira, do a fair bit of the planning — she knows how much they enjoy it and likes that they can bond over some ideas. But she's given them strict instructions not to go overboard. Even though they have a

The Guests

So much for a low-key affair — sources say Mila and Ashton's many A-list friends will pad out the guest list. "Most of their guests will be relatives, and they both have large families," says an insider, "but of course there will be some stars there!" The source says the who's-who list includes the couple's former costars Cameron Diaz, James Franco and Channing Tatum, as well as good friends Gwyneth Paltrow and Richard

FAMILY FIRST

What might be on the horizon instead: another baby. Insiders say both Mila and Ashton have become enamored of parenthood; and in fact, the usually mum couple have become truly effusive parents. Mila has said that Wvatt represents "the truest meaning of unconditional love," adding, "When she was born, I was like, 'This is the most incredible thing that's ever happened." Ashton recently gushed, "The whole thing is pretty exceptional" and admitted that he'd developed a "hero complex" after learning how to soothe his new daughter. He went on to say that he's especially in awe of Mila. "She's the greatest mom... I go to work every day and I come home and she's perfect. It just seems like everything went amazing and I know that something probably didn't go amazing, but she never complains. It's unbelievable. She's incredible."

Not that Ashton had any doubts before, but now, more than ever, sources say he's ready to get on with a wedding and expanding his family. "They are actively trying," says a friend, "and hoping for a boy! Mila would love a little Ashton, and he would adore a mini-me."

The source adds that Mila's recent launch of her production company, Orchard Farm Productions, will allow her to keep working on movies behind the scenes — and, simultaneously, keep getting pregnant. "Adding to her family is a priority," says the source. "She and Ashton are on cloud nine at the moment — and can only see things getting better."

NICK CANNON

WITHOUT MARIAH CAREY'S MONEY, NICK CANNON CAN NO LONGER MAINTAIN HIS OPULENT LIFESTYLE

xtravagant vacations, unlimited designer duds, diamonds galore — those are just a few of the perks Nick Cannon enjoyed during his six-year marriage to Mariah Carey.

Although it isn't a surprise the rapper-actor-entrepreneur wants to keep up his A-list lifestyle following his August 2014 split from his superstar wife, insiders reveal that he's finding it more difficult than expected now that he's cut off from Mimi's seemingly endless supply of cash.

"Mariah is one of the richest women in the music industry, and she let Nick buy anything he wanted," a source tells OK!. "He used to spend so much money on clothes and shoes that even Mariah thought it was funny!" But since their separation, Nick, 34, is having a hard time coming to terms with the fact that his disposable income has essentially disappeared. "He's behaving like he still has access to his ex's bank account," adds the source. "But his > own paychecks are nowhere near high enough to sustain his expensive habits."

A fairy tale no more. Mimi has an iron-clad prenup for her $520 million fortune.

BUSINESS IS BAD

Although Nick has been working in entertainment since graduating from high school, he only secured his most lucrative gigs after hooking up with Mariah, 46. Just months after their 2008 nuptials, he was brought on to host America's Got Talent. That same year, he became the chairman of Nickelodeon subsidiary TeenNick and formed his multimedia company, Ncredible Entertainment, establishing himself as more than just Mimi's kept man — at least from the outside.

Keeping Up Appearances

Since filing for divorce in December, Nick has made sure to keep his Instagram flashy, posting pics of custom Louboutins (above), stylish suits and tons of bling. "The more Nick tries to flaunt that he isn't affected by the split, more Nick tries to flaunt that he isn't affected by the split, the more he's hurting himself," says financial planner Samuel Rad. "At this rate, he could wind up in debt."

Despite their potential, experts tell OK! that Nick's business ventures may not be as profitable as they seem. "Most of the money celebrities make goes to their lawyers, because they're the ones who are brokering the deals and securing their clients' works in addition to protecting their name and brand," says Todd Schoenberger, a managing partner at LandColt Capital in New York City. "Many celebrities are living paycheck to paycheck."

A source adds that NCredible employees are fearful the company may fail without Mariah's financial life vest. Amber Rose and French Montana are the company's most high-profile clients, and neither of their music careers is successful enough to bring in a substantial profit. "Many people there are worried about losing their jobs," says the source.

BIG SPENDER

Although business isn't exactly booming, sources believe Nick wouldn't be in dire straits if he reined in his spending habits. "He drops hundreds of thousands of dollars on clothes and shoes alone," says the insider. And while he may have scored pricey items for free in the past, without Mariah by his side, Nick no longer commands the type of public attention and interest that he used to. "Now that he's flying solo, he's got nothing to offer," says the source, which explains why Nick is desperate to keep things cordial with Mimi. In fact, the exes just spent Easter together with their twin son and daughter, Moroccan and Monroe, 4. "Nick knows he can't sustain his lifestyle without her help," adds the source. "But he broke Mariah's heart. She's done paying his way."

eating habits. Later, a distraught Kris Jenner, 59, asked eldest daughters Kourtney, 35, and Kim, 34, to join her for a meeting with an unnamed advisor, and the trio recounted Rob's downward spiral. Kourtney lamented the fact that he "had it so easy"; Kim called him "the king of excuses"; and Kris detailed his withdrawal from family activities.

Now insiders tell OK! that Rob is so sick of his family cashing in on his life, he's threatening them with legal action. "Even after he's refused to appear on the show — and been cut out of his family's $100 million extension deal — his life is used as a story line," says a source. "He wants to find an ironclad way to stop them from even mentioning his name on the show, let alone discussing his mental health."

HELPING OR HURTING?

Whether intentional or not, the April 5 episode aimed at "saving" Rob gave him precisely what he did not want: attention. Those who keep up with the Kardashians outside of the confines of their heavily edited show could have guessed the veiled problems his mom was referring to. On top of gaining more than 100 pounds in the past year, there are also reports of Rob's heavy boozing and drug abuse.

"He's shocked at how his family feigns concern," says a pal. "If they were genuinely worried about him, he thinks they'd realize that talking about him on TV is only making things worse and pushing him away."

At this point, Rob has even walked out on the one person he always believed would have his back: Khloé. While she gave him a roof over his head and a shoulder to cry on, Rob is starting to feel that she can be just as bad as the others. "He knows she's snooping on him and talking behind his back," says the source, "and it's not like she asks the crew to shut the cameras off. Now he's questioning her allegiance."

CASHING OUT

Rob knows he needs to cut ties with Kris and his spotlight-seeking siblings before he can truly focus on getting better. However, since he doesn't currently have a source of income, the insider says he must tread carefully. "He's aware they expect him to walk back through the door when money runs out, without realizing that they're actually the cause of his problems," the source says. His solution? Sue them for earnings - to the tune of $50 million based on the use of his story line on KUWTK. "It'll be an uphill battle, but Rob believes that he's entitled to the money since his struggles have been featured so prominently on the show," reveals the source. Now the few friends Rob has left can only hope that if his family is serious about helping him, thev'll be there for him offcamera, before his life gets any worse. OK!

AND HUSBAND ADAM SHULMAN

ARE ECSTATIC THEY'RE FINALLY

BECOMING PARENTS

FOLLOWING THE PLAN

From the start, the couple envisioned a large family, including some biological children and some they would adopt. But

Babies on the Brain!

ANNE HAS OFTEN DISHED ABOUT WANTING TO BE A PARENT

"I have been chomping at the bit to be a mom for a really long time. I also had to find a baby daddy first – which I now have."

"I want to have a family of a certain size... I'd like to have a few naturally and adopt. I gotta get on it, you know?"

"I just want to be the one that they love and... be their guide toward being good people."

"I'm the only one here [at an actress roundtable interview] who's not a mother. I hope to join the ranks soon."

getting pregnant has been "a real struggle," says the source. "There have been some very frustrating, heartbreaking moments. Anne was convinced that being so healthy and having a vegan diet meant that it would happen immediately, but that just wasn't the case. They've seen fertility doctors and tried alternative medicine, and nothing seemed to work."

So, the couple got the ball rolling on adoption, and when they did, they looked close to home rather than abroad, "Anne said she wanted their first child to be American," says the insider, "because she wants to help needy children here. But adopting from overseas is definitely something she and Adam would consider in the future."

WELCOME TO NEW YORK

Though she recently sold a Brooklyn pad to make Los Angeles her home base, the source says Anne and Adam talked about the best place to raise a child and settled on a return to New York, "Anne's favorite city" (she was born in Brooklyn and raised largely in New Jersey). "Both Anne and Adam want their son or daughter to have access to the best education and culture, with lots of museums and theaters to enjoy," adds the source. "They are determined to raise a very well-rounded child." Anne is also very close to her actress mother, Kate, who may move in at first to help with the baby. "Anne listens to everything her mom says," the source notes. "She'll lean on her when the time comes."

THE MORE, THE MERRIER

With a thriving career and an Oscar on her shelf, Anne – who's been acting since she was a kid — is more than ready to take a step back and venture into motherhood. "I've had one goal in mind for the past 12 years," she said in 2012, "which is: get a movie, get a movie, get a movie. Now I might have to say: get a baby, get a baby, get a baby."

While she and Adam wait for the adoption to be completed, they are already thinking ahead. "I'd like to have as many [children] as I can afford," Anne has said, "not just financially but in terms of time, because you want to make sure each one feels special." No worries - it seems there's more than enough love to go around.

After all her drama with Justin Bieber, Selena Gomez, 22, deserves a good boyfriend. Enter Zac Efron, 27, a fellow Disney vet (he was in High School Musical, she starred on Wizards of Waverly Place) who's also been to rehab. Who better to offer Selena the support and TLC she needs? Bonus: She's confessed to crushing on him for ages!

As a couple, these trendsetters would set the fashion world on fire (no surprise, they even hung out together at last year's Paris Fashion Week). They've also got music in common: Jared Leto, 43, covered Rihanna's hit "Stay" with his band, Thirty Seconds to Mars. But we love the fact that Rihanna. 27. has said she finds it "really hot when a man loves his mom" - and, whaddava know. Jared memorably paid tribute to his mother (also his date) when he won his Oscar for Dallas Buyers Club. Aww!

Demi Moore, it's time to ditch the boytoys! "I'm often attracted to tall women with long, dark hair," Gerard Butler, 45, has said, and Demi, 52, has the locks (if not the height) to qualify. The two have been pals since visiting Haiti in 2010 with Artists for Peace and Justice, and witnesses reported they had a blast later that year in a Detroit karaoke bar.

Gwyneth Paltrow, 42, is famous for many things (especially her highfalutin lifestyle site, Goop), but a rollicking sense of humor isn't one of them. Who better to help the Oscar winner cut loose than funnyman Jason Segel, 35? He can even read his novel for kids, Nightmαres!, to her children.

MOORE THE MERRIER

HOW THE OSCAR WINNER HAS LEARNED

TO BALANCE WORK, FAMILY AND THE

PRESSURES OF FAME

nominated turn playing a depressed woman who takes off on a 1,000-mile hike in Wild — "the hardest thing I ever did as an actress" — Reese Witherspoon is ready to lighten up. "They don't all have to be dark roles," she says. Witness her new film, Hot Pursuit, a rare female buddy comedy (out May 8) that teams her with Sofia Vergara. "I don't think I've ever spent so much time laughing on a set," says Reese, 39. Here, she shares how she's learned to worry less and enjoy life with her Hollywood agent husband, Jim Toth, 44, and three children, Ava, 16, Deacon, 12, and Tennessee, 2.

Your career is booming, and you've got three kids at home, including a 2-year-old. How do you juggle it all? It can get chaotic sometimes, but whether you're working a lot or not, life with children will always be a bit unpredictable. All mothers have a lot to deal with, and I've been doing it since I was 22 and Ava was born. But we have such a beautiful family that it's not something I really stress about. The most difficult thing for me is finding time for myself to just relax and not worry about things, which is my natural inclination.

What do you do to relax?

I like walking in nature, where it's so peaceful and calm. That's been my form of therapy as an adult.

Have you ever felt your work intruding on your family life?

It's never something I've considered to be a problem. My mother never stopped working; she's a very strong-willed, dynamic and pragmatic woman — a type A personality, which was also my nickname as a teenager. I've never been able to stand still, and I can be bossy — not in a bad way but in the sense of wanting to get things done.

Are your kids aware of your fame?

Ava and Deacon are very aware of the work I do, and the rest they don't pay attention to. They've seen most of my films, and needless to say my daughter loves Legally Blonde! But when I come home, they see me as a mother. They want me to listen to what they've been doing, help them with their homework. It's only their friends who see me as the big movie star.

Do you and your husband talk about work when you're at home?

It's tough sometimes, because we're in the same business. But we usually talk about how our days went and spend time with the kids. Our children are the most beautiful part of our lives, and our little boy has been such a wonderful addition to the family. Ava has taken a big interest in him; she likes giving him his bath, which is a godsend for me!

uxury knitwear designer Ronny Kobo, known for her celebfavorite line, Torn by Ronny Kobo, makes clothes that look and feel great. We chatted with Ronny about her new elevated collection, Ronny Kobo, out this spring.

How do you make your garments so figure-flattering?

We design and cut each piece so that it will complement a woman's body. A body shaper isn't even necessary.

Which celebrities do you love to see in your designs?

Beyoncé, Kim Kardashian and Sofia Vergara look beautiful in my line, but lately I'm loving how Taylor Swift wears the clothing gracefully and with such poise.

What's one item every woman needs for spring?

A sexy dress. There is nothing better than stepping out in the warm weather and showing off what's been hidden all winter long.

Who's your fashion icon? Jane Birkin in the late 1970s. She was effortlessly chic.

Any advice for new designers? Trust your gut.

Tell us about the contestants this season.

Between the home bakers and the pros, we have an amazing group of talented contestants. I really find myself pulling for each of them at one point or another throughout the series. Who do you see as the show's toughest judge?

Duff Goldman, Nancy Fuller and Lorraine Pascale are all firm and fair in their own way.
But I think Duff, because of his background, definitely makes contestants the most nervous.

Do you think baking is harder than cooking?

No, I don't. Baking is tough because you have to be precise, but as long as you can read and follow directions, you should get the proper outcome.

Cooking is so subjective, but you can easily take a wrong turn and ruin a dish by oversalting or overcooking your meats or vegetables.

What do you consider the hardest dessert to make?

I think things that can fall – like soufflés – are very difficult. And for chefs who live in a place where it's humid, candies can be hard to get just right, since they are affected by the weather!

What's the most important cooking tip you've received from your mom, Paula?

To have fun and not be intimated by it. Don't be afraid to try something new if you've never made it before. But she did add that whenever you cook for a group, make sure to do a practice round first if you're feeling adventurous with your menu!

DIETITIAN KERI GANS ON HABITS THAT'LL KEEP YOU LOOKING GREAT YEAR-ROUND

orget yo-yo dieting.
The key to sustained weight loss is a sensible eating plan — one that doesn't leave you feeling deprived. Here, dietitian
Keri Gans, author of The Small Change Diet, shares simple tips to help you make smart choices, whether you're at the dinner table or on the go.

What's an eating habit that sabotages good intentions?

Believe it or not, many salads have more calories than other options, like a sandwich! Go easy on bacon, cheeses and candied nut toppings. Instead, enjoy a salad with raw veggies and fruits, and order lighter dressings, like balsamic vinaigrette, on the side to help control the portion.

How do you eat right when you're really busy?

I keep Healthy Choice frozen meals in my home and work freezers to avoid digging into the candy stash, and they leave me with the satisfaction only a warm meal can give.

What's a good trick for making a nutritious meal that doesn't sacrifice flavor?

I like to keep canned tomatoes on hand for healthy salsas and pasta salads. Not only do they add flavor, but they also may help you meet USDA's MyPlate veggie goal!

Thermo-Rx® combined with all the other components in Fastin®-XR was shown in the same double-blind, placebo controlled study to elevate Energy Expenditure (Metabolism) 371% when compared against Caffeine at 3hrs post ingestion and 871% over Placebo at its highest point.
